IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

LESSON FOR JANUARY 9

JESUS TEACHES FORGIVENESS.

LESSON TEXT—Matt. 18:21-35.
GOLDEN TEXT—If ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you.—Matt. 6:14.
REFERENCE MATERIAL—Matt. 6:12-15; 18:15-20; Luke 17:3, 4; Eph. 4:31, 32; Col. 3:13-14.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Forgiving One Another.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Learning to Forgive.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Forgiving and Forgiven.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Forgiveness: Its Meaning and Scope.

In this lesson we have divine instructions as to our behavior in case of ill-treatment.

I. Peter's Question (v. 21).

This question, "How often shall my brother sin against me and I forgive him?" probably was occasioned by the ill treatment which Peter was then receiving at the hands of his fellow disciples. Christ's confession of Peter brought him into the limelight. The question of the disciples (18:1) "Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven?" shows that there was some jealousy of Peter among the disciples and consequent contention among them. From the Lord's teaching as to the efforts to bring about reconciliation in case of offenses between brother and brother He knew that it would require the exercise of the spirit of forgiveness. Peter disposed to be gracious inquires "Till seven times?" showing his readiness to forgive his brother not three times, but twice three times and a little over.

II. Jesus' Answer (v. 22).

The Lord's answer was an astonishing revelation to Peter. He said "Not until seven times, but until seventy times seven." This shows that our willingness to forgive should be limitless.

III. The Two Creditors (vv. 23-35).

This parable of the two creditors illustrates His principles of forgiveness.

1. The gracious creditor (vv. 23-27). The king in this parable represents God, and the servant who is greatly in debt represents the sinner—any sinner, every sinner, you and me. We were hopelessly in debt to God. Ten thousand talents are equal to some twelve millions of dollars. To meet this obligation would be an utter impossibility. This man's plea for time, promising to pay all, much resembles our vain imaginings that we can pay our debt to God, that by our future good works we can atone for our past most grievous sins. By the justice of God's law we were hopelessly condemned; by the grace of God we were freely pardoned.

2. The cruel creditor (vv. 28-35). This man who was forgiven so much found a man who owed him a small sum—about fifteen or seventeen dollars. He shut his ears to the man's entreaty to be patient with him, flew at his throat and cruelly put him into jail. The great mercy shown him did not touch his heart, so he refused to be merciful. Being set free from so great a debt as our sins against God, we should make God's act of unlimited forgiveness toward us the standard of unlimited forgiveness toward others. In dealing with others we should always keep these considerations before us: (1) We ourselves need it and do every day continue to need the forgiveness of God. With all our imperfections and positive sins we need the continued mercy of God. When we pray, "Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors," let us be sure that we have put away all thought of sin held against others. To pray that prayer otherwise is an abomination. (2) That there is a day of judgment coming and at that day we shall be treated as we treat others. No mercy will be shown to those who have not shown mercy.

The heart, then, of this lesson is that God's gracious act toward us should be the standard of our actions toward others, and that we must exercise the same spirit of forgiveness toward our fellowmen if we would continue to enjoy God's forgiveness. The proof that we are God's children is that we manifest the spirit of God. "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect" (Matt. 5:48).

Thank God Every Morning.

Thank God every morning when you get up that you have something to do that day which must be done whether you like it or not. Being forced to work and forced to do your best will breed in you temperance, self-control, diligence, strength of will, content, and a hundred virtues which the idle never know.—Charles Kingsley.

Jesus' Idea of God.

Jesus was filled with the joy of life because He had the most joyous idea of God that was ever thought of. Jesus taught the disciples that they could take the finest things in life and, raising them to their highest power, ascribe them to God. He told them about the Fatherhood of God and said, "If ye who are evil know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more your heavenly Father!" Jesus taught men to interpret God in the terms of the spiritually best:

Warm—watertight—cleaned in a minute: That's the "U. S." Walrus. It's just one model in the big U. S. line of rubber footwear.

A new kind of overshoe for farmers

The "U.S." Walrus: watertight as a rubber boot—as warm and easy to slip on as an arctic

THE combination you have always needed—something to keep your feet dry and warm and yet easy to slip on and off! Here it is—the new U. S. Walrus.

This new overshoe slips on and off easily over your leather shoes. Its warm, fleecy lining keeps your feet comfortable in the coldest weather. And its smooth rubber surface can be washed off as quickly and cleanly as a boot.

The comfort and convenience of this new overshoe are backed by real strength. Made by the oldest and largest rubber manufacturer in the world, the U. S. Walrus is built for the roughest wear. Its sole consists of five layers of the finest rubber. All other points where the strain comes are reinforced.

Ask your dealer to show you the U. S. Walrus. After you've worn them you'll realize why farmers everywhere are buying them.

Other types of "U. S." Footwear—built for rough service.

U. S. Boots have the wear and comfort which the accumulated improvements of 74 years have given them.

U. S. Booties lace on over the sock like a leather shoe. You can wear them all day long in the wettest weather. Your feet will stay dry and comfortable.

There is a U. S. model for every need—arctics, rubbers, "overs." Every one has been designed by experts—every one is backed by over half a century of experience. Always look for the U. S. Seal—it means solid wear and long service for your money.

"U. S." Boots—are made in all sizes and styles—Hip, Half-Hip and Knee. In red, black and white.

John Quincy Adams at 16.

Europe, and he came home to enter Harvard. After graduation, he opened a law office in Boston. But business was only beginning when the young attorney was appointed by Washington, minister at The Hague, where the government to which he was accredited fled before the armies of France and left him in the midst of the triumphant revolutionists. Meeting the daughter of the American consul in London, a Marylander, she and the young diplomat were married on the eve of his departure for Berlin, to which capital he had been promoted.

Among his last acts as president, John Adams removed his son from office to deprive Jefferson of the malicious satisfaction of dismissing him. (When the recalled diplomat was elected to the senate he displayed his family trait of independence by taking sides with his father's hated rival and supporting the Jefferson administration.)

The infuriated federalists of Massachusetts savagely turned upon him as a traitor to his party and a renegade from his class. They drove him from the senate, and when he came home he found himself in his Boston house, which stood where the Hotel Touraine now stands, a social outcast on a lonely island entirely surrounded by ice.

With his name erased forever from the Boston blue book, John Quincy Adams was no longer a gentleman, and the Jeffersonians, who were not gentlemen, but only Democrats, took him up. By their favor he became minister to Russia, a negotiator of the peace of Ghent in 1814, and minister to England. From London, John Quincy Adams was called home to be secretary of state in the Monroe administration. In that post he played the leading part in shaping the Monroe doctrine.

In his retirement John Adams had watched with fond admiration the rise of John Quincy until he was only one rung from the top. Although, in his crabbedness, he complained that "my son will never get a chance at the presidency until the last Virginian is in his grave," fortune agreeably surprised the aged ex-president in next to the last of his ninety years, when he saw the scepter of the republic pass to a lineal hand.

A Woman Likes to be Admired, No Matter How Old She May Be

Nature undoubtedly made woman to be admired, and man to admire her. No woman ever gets so old that she doesn't want admiration, and no man ever gets beyond admiring her. Good looks in women do not depend upon age, but upon health. You never see a good-looking woman who is weak, run-down, irritable, out of sorts, fidgety, and nervous. Headaches, backaches, dragging pains, irregularities and troubles of that sort are all destroyers of beauty. Men do not admire sickness. Here is what one Pennsylvania woman says:

Scranton, Pa.:—"For over a year I suffered with feminine trouble. I lost in weight until I was almost skin and bones. I had severe backaches, pains in my side and stomach. I suffered with a gastric condition and could not retain anything on my stomach. At times a drink of water would distress me. I doctored but did not seem to improve until I began taking Dr. Pierce's medicine and a few bottles of this so completely cured me that I have never had any return of these ailments. I grew strong and gained back my weight. I can recommend 'Favorite Prescription' to those who suffer as I did."—MRS. BERTHA SOHNS, 8 S. Webster Ave.

Water Affects Teeth.

Scientific investigation discloses the fact that where "hard" water is used for drinking, good teeth are the general result. "Hard" water contains a large amount of lime which enters largely into the composition of teeth.

INFLUENZA

Guard the System against this Deadly Disease

The doctors say Influenza in the virulent form of the past year will be prevalent again during the present season of wet and cold.

Now, as then, the danger is largely a matter of neglect. People lost their lives trying to "fight it off."

Watch for the symptoms—the cold, sore throat, slight chills and temperature, lassitude. Take proper precautions—keep the bowels open. Rest is what the body needs. Bathe the throat and chest with warm water to open the pores, and dry thoroughly; apply Krew-Pina, rubbing well into the skin; also, put a little into the nostrils. Then, lie down, draw the bed clothes up over the nose; inhale the medicinal vapors given off by the ointment. Repeat at intervals of several hours.

Krew-Pina is invaluable for emergency and general family use. Scientifically compounded entirely of simple home remedies, such as Oil of Pine and other volatile oils, it is unusually effective and absolutely harmless as well. Try it for inflammations of all description, including croup, bronchitis, tonsillitis, rheumatism, etc., and for stiff joints, burns, scalds, cuts and bruises. 30c and 60c jars—at your druggist's.

Free Sample Krew-Pina will be sent to any address on request. THE KREW-PINA CO., INC. WAYNESBURG, PA.

Chinese Made First Bread?

It is said that the Chinese were the first bread makers, and they made bread from wheat and rice as early as 1908 B. C. Probably the first bread made from yeast was baked in England in about 1634. Aerated bread, which rises from carbonic acid gas injected into the dough, became somewhat common in 1837 but practically all bread, bakery-made or home-made, owes its leavening to yeast or baking powder.

The teacher had seen numerous notes in vain endeavor to get Johnny bathed and cleaned up. There was no reply and no visible improvement in the boy's appearance, until at last the mother, driven to desperation, sent the teacher a long letter saying, among other things: "What is it to the teachers whether the children in their schools have a bath once a day, or once a week, or once a month, or once a year? They are washing the sap all out of the children, and that is how so much tuberculosis gets started."

Our Inventory

We have been in the Music business in Bedford County for many years. However, as the KOONTZ MUSIC HOUSE, we have had greatly enlarged facilities for serving the people. We are just now closing the first year of this house's existence. During that year we have carried into hundreds of homes happiness, in the form of MUSIC. We have made many friends. Old ties have been more firmly cemented. We thank our friends for their patronage. We face the new year with the desire to be worthy of their continued confidence and while we wish one and all a we do so with the conviction that it will be a happier year for all who plan to give music, during the coming year, a larger place in the life of the family; and with the assurance that the happiness of none shall be marred by any inferior musical instruments going forth from this store. Remember, EVERY PIANO PLACED MUST PLEASE.

HAPPY NEW YEAR

Fordson

The Ford Motor Company have just issued a book called "The Fordson at Work." This book is given free. Call in and get one. If you cannot call, write and we will mail you one without charge. It is not what the Ford Motor Company says about the Fordson Tractor but what the army of users have to say. This book voices the hardest kind of practical experience. It shows in illustration the Fordson Tractor at actual work along some ninety different lines of activity. It shows in these illustrations the wonderful versatility and utility of the Fordson Tractor. Shows it to be, beyond all question, the one bit of machinery that is a necessity, not only on the farm but along many lines of commercial business; especially does it show up the Fordson as a valuable servant on the farm. With it the farmer is relieved of the hard work; because he can take advantage of the weather in preparing his seed bed; he can do it at the right time; the same is true when it comes to harvesting. It solves, to a great extent, the problem of the scarcity of labor.

With its wonderful reliable power, it brings to the farm home all the conveniences, in the way of running water in the house, electric lights, operation of the washing machine, churning, separating the cream from the milk; it assumes and takes to itself the drudgery of the farm life both in the field and in the house and it is only a matter of a few years until it will be as universal in its service on the farm as to the farmer himself. It will become a part of farm life; a beneficial part; a profitable part. Get order in for there's a rush coming.

Hymn for the New Year

Come, let us sing
Our journey pursue—
Roll round with the year,
And never stand still till the Master appear:
His adorable will Let us gladly fulfill,
And our talents improve
By the patience of hope, and the labor of love.

Our life is a dream;
Our time, as a stream,
Chides swiftly away,
And the fugitive moment refuses to stay:
The arrow is down,
The moment is gone:
The millennial year
Rushes on to our view, and eternity's near.

O that each, in the day
Of his coming, may say,
"I have fought my way through;
I have finished the work Thou didst give me to do."
O that each from his Lord
May receive the glad word,
"Well and faithfully done!"
Enter into My joy, and sit down on My throne!"

Seven Sentence Sermons

MEAN to be something with all your might.—Phillips Brooks.

Doing what can't be done is the glory of living.—General Armstrong.

A bright New Year and a sunny track
Along an upward way,
And a song of praise on looking back,
When the year has passed away;
And golden sheaves, nor small, nor few!
This is my New Year's wish for you!

—Anon.

If you tell the truth, you have infinite power supporting you; but if not, you have infinite power against you.—Charles George Gordon.

And let the peace of Christ rule in your hearts, to the which also ye were called in one body; and be ye thankful.—Col. 2, 15.

I asked the New Year for some message sweet,
Some rule of life which to guide my feet;
I asked, and passed; he answered, soft and low,
"God's will to know."
—Anon.

What thou hast in store
This coming year, I do not stop to ask;
Enough, if day by day there dawns before me
My appointed task;
I seek not great things,
For I have learned how vain such seeking is,
But let me seek Thy will, O King of kings,
And find therein my bliss.
—O. E. Fuller.

BEGINNING A NEW YEAR.

Though we are apt to think that New Year's has been observed since the year one, such is not the case. In fact, there is no mention of the day as a Christian festival until the fifth century, and even now the Hebrews celebrate their New Year's in September, for their calendar is arranged according to the new moon, which makes New Year's a moveable holiday. Today, however, there is scarcely a nation but observes this season of the year in some manner or other, though customs differ in most localities.

A Resolution

TO be patriots, rather than partisans; to win the peace by reviving the idealism which won the war; to broaden our outlook and narrow our animosities; to carry into national and international affairs the maxims which guide gentlemen and gentlemen in their daily conduct; to practice thrift that we may be able to practice charity; to recognize that each of us is and always must be his brother's keeper; to work well that there may be plenty of goods in the world and think well that they may be rightly distributed; to go forward each day to a higher level of purpose and effectiveness, and live as one afraid of no man, and of whom no just man is afraid.

THE GOOD NEW YEAR

EMORY J. HAYNES
in the Boston Globe

IT WAS foretold forty years ago. The New Year shall be a good one. This is the story of the prophecy. It depends upon you to believe it. Forty years ago a lone skater upon the glassy surface of a lake in northern New England celebrated his solitary holiday. At the far end of his ten-mile dash he rested in the noon-day sun, sitting at the base of a towering cliff.

He was a stonemason's apprentice, a mere boy workman. He habitually carried his steel chisel in his pocket. Climbing high, and with much hazard, up the face of the towering rocks, he cut this legend in the face of the mountain:

"The New Year Will Be Good."
The bold lettering is visible for miles. The lake in summer is a favorite resort of pleasure parties. Each year thousands of eyes have spelled out the cheery monograph, while boats passed, and many a hearty laugh has rung with a heartier joy as old and young have approved the sculptured promise.

It will long endure, for the steel cut deep, and the mountain will not remove, nor the pretty lake pass away. The boy did not date it. Fortunately so, for that makes it fit every year and every reader. Why not for a century to come?

A thousand times the question has been asked: "Who wrote it?" And no one knew. So it seemed some eternal truth of nature that the very rocks had miraculously inscribed upon themselves.

It was true to anyone who would take the trouble to lift his eyes and read it. In storms the snow silvered the lettering. In sun the words gleamed with lines of living light. A sentence by no means elegant, but crude and boyish rather. Yet what rhetoric could add to the abrupt and simple prophecy from a hopeful, healthy spirit?

The New Year was to be just plain "good." Was that enough? Is it not enough for us all? One good to you, another good to me, still another good to others. But always to all who will grasp it, written on the very face of the turning globe, the next year will be "good."

Last summer a wealthy visitor at the lakeside hotel drew the proprietor to the corner of the veranda, and lifting his glasses, asked: "Do you see those letters on the rocks? I am the boy who cut them, January 1, 1847. You seem glad to know the author. I never revealed the fact. Why should I?"

"It is not because I said it that it is true. No matter who says it, on a Happy New Year the New Year will be good. It is true in itself. Happy the man or boy who says it, who feels it, and who will have it so."

"The mere freak of a moment, yet somehow later I awoke to the fact that I had written a life creed on my heart out of the hopefulness and daring of a boy."

Let us take the hope and courage of youth as the truth of this latest of our years. The New Year must be good. We will make it good. Can you not see those lettered cliffs? No visitor ever was dull to their magic spell, and many have read them through grateful tears.

SLEIGHBELLS JINGLE—

Hear the moaning and the groaning of the winter breeze; Old Year's dying—bear him sighing, listen to him wheeze! Weary Willie is quite chilly in his threadbare coat; this cold weather altogether gets his ill-clad goat. Old Brer Rabbit's wary habits now avail him not; bounds are telling by their yelling that the trail is hot. See the fuel fight a duel with your next week's pay; watch your meter and the heater steal your heart away! You remember last September, August and July? Sun was shining, you were whining, vowing you would die! You were praying for some sleighing cry for some ice, now it's freezing, quit your sneezing; yell, and say it's nice!

A New Year's Wish

What can I wish for you in this New Year
More than I wish you every day;
What can I say, I have not said before,
What new prayer can I pray?
For every hour of every day
Deep in my inmost heart I say
A Prayer for you!

What can I ask for you this coming year
More than I dared to ask before;
What new gift can I crave from Heaven for you?
From Love's own boundless store?
My heart petitions from the Throne of Grace
One blessing more!
For every day of every year
You are more dear!

No blessing can I beg of you this year
More than you gave to me before;
Your lips to kiss, your hand in mine to hold
Now, as of yore!
Your love to guard, your happiness to keep
In life till death, and when we "fall on sleep"
To meet once more!

TAPS

WELL, Old Year, good-bye—Taps while you die!

You brought a lot of new things to us. You have told us a lot of our failings and helped us to step better. You have tripped us up and knocked us down and talked cross to us, at times. But we understood, and didn't mind, because we knew you thought a lot of us.

So, Taps to you, as you steal away into a past strewn with the efforts of the mighty.

We made a lot of mistakes while you were with us, Old Year. But Taps to them. We went ahead and did things without thinking them carefully out. And then you told us afterward of these blunders. So, you see, we learned. Thank you, Old Year.

How many times we were disappointed! What great things passed us by! But Taps for them, now, too. Life, after all, is but an unfolding, a sowing and a reaping, a going to bed at nighttime and a getting up in the morning, tears and laughter, work and rest, while Time plays about us. But now you are going away, Old Year. Good luck to you with what we have given to you. Taps!

For all that we have lost or failed in—Taps!

But no regrets—just gladness for chances, and a million prods of every sort hidden away in the somewhere to find us all anew in the glad New Year that will awaken us on the morrow. We tried, we failed—we won! While you go, we smile, and a few tears touch our smiles. But we blow our Taps. Listen to them, Old Year. And good-bye!—Detroit Free Press.

NEW YEAR'S IN MANILA.

To occidental eyes New Year's day in Manila is a strange olla podrida of Christmas, Easter and Fourth of July. The day is ushered in with early mass, celebrated in the cathedral, which is attended by all the women attired in old clothes, and the poorer class barefooted, and the wealthy in sombre black with black mantillas or shawls shrouding their heads. But immediately after breakfast everybody begins to drink and preen for callers. Raven locks are plastered into elaborate coiffures with coconut oil and crowned with red or yellow blossoms.

A Prayer

Almighty God, our Father, through the coming year, it is Thee we seek, for guidance, for peace, for support. Teach us amid the turmoil of life to feel Thy presence distilling health and joy. As we peer into the future, let its gates roll back and show us face to face with our Father. As we gaze at the world, and tremble before its dimly known forces and its undiscovered events, and as we dread the mystery and the bigness of things, let the clouds fold up and disclose Thee keeping watch above Thine own! Amid threats of disaster and terror of the unknown and foreboding, we would hear Thy voice, saying, "It is I, be not afraid." Make us ever at home with Thee, amid the clamors of men, the turmoil of events, or the raging of the deep, and amid all our ordeals of struggle and pain. For Jesus Christ's sake. Amen.

Hello, here we are again. Happy New Year to all! The Old Year has gone! Let it go.

Henry McKinney expects to move to Schellsburg this coming Spring. Lea Imgrund recently purchased a fine Packard touring car.

A. P. Hillegass is now laid up for repairs with an attack of Rheumatism.

Roy Hillegass who has been employed in ohnstown spent over Christmas with home folks.

Urban Imgrund recently purchased a new Packard Truck and now says he is fully equipped in taking the whole family along on a sight seeing trip.

Howard Hillegass spent some time recently on Dry Ridge. Pete says Leap Year is past and now it is his chance. What's wrong that young lady is bashful.

T. H. Deaner and George Weyant made a business trip to New Buena Vista a few days ago.

Clarence Imgrund has been each week at the county seat. What is it a business course?

We recently notice that the Census director says 50 more Congressmen are necessary. While the move is a necessary thing we suggest also the following essentials, five legs for a dog, three hip pockets in trousers, rain coats for submarine drivers, long tails for goats.

An Acquired Art.

Those who always say the right thing at the right time have schooled themselves to talk less than other people.—Boston Transcript.

Well we have had some very nice weather the past week. Green Christmas represents a fat graveyard but we hope this time that it may represent more work this time.

The Shooting Match which was held in Six Mile Run was very largely attended some very close shooting was done. Elmer Hinnershott one eyed marksman won a very nice turkey. Searl Grove formally of Clearridge pulled off some fine shooting by winning a nice turkey. The boys say they are going to do better the next match as they expect to have halftime idle and they will have more time to practice.

Paul Teeter who has been employed by Roy S. Figard spent New Years at his home in Morrison Cove.

Mrs. Wade H. Figard and daughter spent Sunday at Broad Top City at John Mosby.

Frank Winter visited at the home of his brother William J. Winter on Sunday.

August Barton and brother Easton Barton and cousin, Roy Barton visited at the home of Wade H. Figard on Sunday last.

Reverend Speace and wife took their New Years dinner with Mrs. John Smith of Coal Dale. The miners of Eichelberger mine surprised Mr. Speace on New Years day by giving him 30 dollars for his New Years gift, worse men than coal diggers.

Peggy Ross who has been suffering with Rheumatism is able to be around again.

Carlos O'neal attended a Social Dance which was held at William Weeks on Friday night in Fulton County. He reported a fine time he reported a better time in 1921 than 1920 as it took a couple of hours to get limbered up.

Mrs. Albert Figard took her son John to Huntingdon Hospital on Monday where she expects to have his Tonsils removed also Howard Thomas took his son Sheldon where he expects to have his Tonsils removed.

Ellsworth Chaney who has been in the Roaring Spring Hospital where he had an operation for appendicitis is getting along nicely.

Those who visited at the home of Albert Figard on Sunday were Pearl Goworthy, Clarence Figard and Raymond Figard.

Annie Foster and her brother Calvin Foster are visiting relatives in Johnstown the past week.

Raymond Figard and Blair Mort were surprised on Christmas evening by old Santa Claus bringing them a Big Grand Victrola which they enjoy very much. We are afraid they will wear it out as there is not much work and they keep hammering away at it. Santa Claus always brings something like that to keep the men at home with their wives.

START TAKING PEPTO-MANGAN Now Is the Time to Build Up, You Will Be Strong This Winter

Every house has a supply of fuel for winter. People know cold weather is coming. They get ready for it.

How many people get their own bodies ready for winter? Most of us go around all summer in the intense heat burning up energy, working hard all day and sometimes lying awake nights sleepless in the heat.

Winter comes along. It catches many people totally unprepared physically. Few of us take stock of our health. Whether we will be well, healthy and strong, we often leave too much to chance.

But not everybody. Nowadays people are learning. They know this matter of enjoying good health is a thing they can help control. If you live right, eat right, get plenty of sleep, breathe fresh air and keep your blood in good condition, you will be all right.

It is so simple. If you feel a little off in health—perhaps worn out and pale don't take no chances. There's no need of it. Buy some Pepto-Mangan of your druggist. Begin taking it today. You can get it in liquid or tablet form. Tell your druggist which you prefer. But to be certain that you get the genuine Pepto-Mangan; ask for it by the full name—"Gude's Pepto-Mangan." Look for the name "Gude's" on the package. Advertisement.

CIVIC CLUB ANNOUNCEMENT

On Monday, January 10, at 7:30 The Bedford Civic Club will hold its regular monthly meeting in the basement of the Trust Company Building. After the business of the evening, Doctor Mary Noble of the State Department of Health will address the meeting. Don't miss the value of the occasion.

The February meeting will be given over to "Thrift." Miss Chase of State College will deal with this important topic. The March meeting will be "Food for thought" where in "he who runs may read;" and "When the birds come north again." The April meeting will close The Bird Prize Contest which is now about to begin.

Happy New Year to All and may you have Health, Wealth and Prosperity.

Altoona Has 55 Miles of Paved Streets

Altoona Merchants To Clear Shelves For 1921 Activities

The month of January has great things in store for the wise buyer. Booster Merchants, always on the alert, are daily making their announcements in the newspapers of drastic and unprecedented price cuts on seasonal merchandise.

Inventory Time in Booster Stores is heralded by city folk and out-of-towners as a money-saving opportunity inevitable. The merchant, in order to clear his shelves MUST use price appeals which are bound to attract.

To a great extent the Christmas demand tended to stabilize prices the country over, but with general buying conditions at hand once again merchants must unload at "whatever prices" in order to have space and cash for new Spring goods.

A perusal of the pages of Altoona's local dailies will show unheard of reductions in things to eat, to wear and to furnish the home, and merchants are driving home the fact that prices are in many cases lower than new merchandise of like quality can be produced.

Altoona Booster merchants, in anticipation of crowds of wise and thrifty purchasers, eager to avail themselves of this golden opportunity, have retained many of the most efficient clerks who were employed for the Christmas season, thus assuring prompt and capable service.

The Bargains in Booster Stores will not alone attract attention, as Booster theatres have excellent bookings for the entire month, so that a part of the day may be spent in needful purchasing and the remainder in pleasurable pursuits.

"The early bird and the fishin' bait" is an old story—come early!

A New Romance of the Storm Country

Chapter VIII. (Continued from last week.)

she broke out abruptly. "I won't stay if he don't."

Uriah's hand went back to his hip. "I guess he'll go if I tell 'im to," said he. "Just hop into your boat, kid, before I fill you up to your teeth with little bits of hot lead."

Tonibel had witnessed scenes like this before. She knew but a tiny pressure of her father's finger on the gun he held would kill her sweetheart.

"Go along," she managed to get out between her chattering teeth. "It'll be worse for both of us if you don't."

Devon was forcing Phillip backward toward the end of the dock, and by this time Reginald had crawled to the shore and had lain down upon it.

"Don't lag, mister," cried Tony to Phillip. "Go along to Ithaca."

MacCauley stepped into his canoe, and Devon sullenly unfasted the rope and threw it into the bow of the boat.

"Don't come back here if you don't want a taste of this," he snapped, reaching his gun. "Get out and stay out, mister."

With the end of the revolver he gave the canoe a shove, and Tony saw the paddle dip into the water and the boy move away.

Uriah stood a moment and looked off to the hills. Then locking Tony in the cabin he went to where Reggie lay on the shore and helped him back to the boat.

CHAPTER IX.

The Face in the Window.

By ten o'clock a heavy rain and wind had settled over the Storm Country with such force that the waves were rolling southward like ivory-crested mountains. Once in a while a heavy thud of thunder reverberated over the lake from the north, losing its roar back of the Cornell buildings on the university campus.

Devon's canal boat was following the little tug which was hugging the western shore northward. Tonibel, in the little room back of the cabin, was searching through the darkness from the small window. But the only thing she could see was the dark bank along which they crept and which once in a while was lit up by a vivid streak of lightning.

Suddenly the engine stopped, and as if she imagined Gussie could help her she gathered her into her arms.

In a vivid streak of lightning she saw they were anchored close to Crowbar point, which protected them somewhat from the wind. She crouched low when the little door opened and Uriah called her name.

"Come out here, Tonibel," he commanded roughly, and Tony, with Gussie in her arms, crept into the cabin, where Reggie was seated on a bunk, looking pale and sullen.

"Set down on the floor, brat," commanded Uriah, and Tonibel dropped down. "Now listen to me, Tony," went on Devon. "Ever since you've been knee high to a grasshopper you've been as mean as the devil. You always got in behind Ede when she was here, but now there ain't no skirts to shove me off. You hear?"

Every vestige of blood left the wan young face.

"Where is mummy?" she said, lifting imploring eyes to his.

"Dead," said Devon brutally, "as dead as a door nail. Here, my lady, if you boller I'll rap you one on the job."

"Dead," cried Tonibel. "Pop, you're lying to me—I know you are!"

"Have it your own way, kid," replied Uriah with an insolent laugh, "but one thing's sure—Ede ain't here to buck against me now. What I want to get into your thick noodle is you're goin' to get married as soon as we get to Auburn. See?"

The girl's eyes remained centered on his face, horror deep-seated in their gray depths.

"Here's Reggie wantin' to marry you," continued Devon, with a wide wave at the lump young man. "And when I say you've got to I mean it."

"I won't," fell from Tony's lips, but the awful expression on her face didn't change nor did she drop her eyes.

Devon took a quick step toward her, with an upraised arm, and as he had beaten his wife so he laid the blows about the girl's head and shoulders. The pig fell from Tony's arms in her desperate efforts to protect herself.

"Oh, daddy, don't, don't, any more!" she screamed.

Reggie Brown was watching the brutal scene dully as if it interested him but little. At the girl's fearful plea Devon stopped back and glared at her.

"Will you do what I bid you, miss?" he demanded hoarsely. "I'd as soon kill you as take a wink."

Tonibel made no answer save to weep more wildly, and because she did not make ready reply, Uriah struck her again. Then suddenly Reginald stood up.

"Don't hit 'er any more, Dev," he drawled. "Shut 'er up a while, and keep 'er without grub, and she'll come to time. Give 'er a night to think it over. God, but you've walloped her black and blue as 'tis."

In answer to this Devon picked Tony up and threw her into the back cabin. Then he kicked Gussie over the threshold, slammed the door and locked it.

Phillip MacCauley had paddled away from the Dirty Mary with a dull, sick fear for the girl he had had to leave behind. To fight single-handed a drunken man with a gun was foolhardy and would do little Tony no good.

When he reached the corner of the lake he ran his craft ashore and sat for a long time thinking. Suddenly he saw through the dusk that the canal boat had left its moorings and was moving slowly northward in the teeth of the rising wind. With an ejaculation he shoved off and was out in the boiling surf. Wherever that boat went he decided to go, too.

As he paddled carefully along, he could see the shadows of two men in the glimmer of the little light in the small pilot house. Then Reggie was there with Devon, but where was Tony?

One small window in the canal boat gave forth a dim light. He felt within him that she was there where that light was, alone and suffering. What had she thought of his allowing himself to be forced away from her when she needed him most? His teeth came together sharply. He was no coward, this Phillip MacCauley, this captain of the Salvation army.

Suddenly he caught sight of a passing shadow in the cabin, and his heart leapt up within him. 'Twas the shadow of a girl walking up and down. Grimly his teeth set into his under lip and with one deep thrust of the paddle into the water, he sent the canoe heading toward the canal boat. Then it was that a girl's face came to the window.

The canoe almost crashed against the side of the bigger boat as it came sidewise of it, and Phillip caught at it desperately. Slowly lifting himself up he thrust his face close to Tony's. She was staring at him blankly as if his ghost had suddenly risen out of the storm-tossed lake.

"Don't do that, darling," he whispered as she drew back in terror. "I'm going to take you away."

Then she realized who it was, and reached out and clutched at him, breathlessly.

"Climb through!" undertoned Phillip. "Quick, climb through, and when I tell you to drop, do it, but not before."

By holding his body rigidly erect, he managed to keep the canoe upright. Then he waited, but not for long. Almost immediately a girl's bare arm shot through the window. Something wriggled in her clutching fingers. Phillip almost lost his hold on the boat as Gussie came against his face. He snatched the pig and dropped it at his feet. Then a pair of bare legs followed and Tony's body began to wriggle through the narrow aperture.

Once or twice Phillip muttered an ejaculation as a streak of lightning crossed the sky only to die and leave the water as dark as before. It was taking the girl an interminable time to squeeze herself through that opening. Suddenly her shoulders were through, and she was hanging on by her hands.

Just at that moment the tug ahead became silent, and Phillip heard the two men walking back along its roof. They were coming aboard the canal boat, and if—He crushed the canoe nearer, lifted one hand and jerked the hanging figure of the girl away from the window. She flopped face downward into the bottom of the canoe and Phillip left her there limp without a word. Then he let go his hold of the canal boat, and a great wave lifted his slender craft upon its crest and they shot away toward the bank.

It took a shorter time than it takes to tell it for the canoe to reach the shore. Under the overhanging trees where they were shielded from the wind, Phillip turned and looked back. A man's face was thrust through the window which had just yielded up the quiet little figure at his feet. Then two forms appeared upon the stern deck. From the hand of one of the men hung a lantern. Phillip remained very still. He knew they could not see him hidden away there in the darkness.

For a long time, through which Tonibel never moved, Phillip waited. The men on the canal boat seemed filled with terror. They ran from one end of it to the other. He heard them calling to and fro, and once in a while an oath escaped from Devon as he screamed his daughter's name loudly.

It was not until he saw one of them climb upon the tug and heard the sudden clang of the engine that the boy took up his paddle and moved slowly along the shore southward, and, as he was going with the wind, Phillip made rapid progress toward the head of the lake.

In a little cove he drew the canoe to the shore and, springing out, dragged it its length from the water.

Then he called softly: "Tony—little Tony."

The girl stirred and lifted her head. "Yep," she sighed. "I'm here."

"Come out," said Phillip, leaning over and taking hold of her arm. "There! Child, don't shake so. You're safe here with me, and I suppose they think you're drowned by this time. Can't you step out, dear?"

She was trembling, so he had to pick her up and lift her out in his arms. Then he carried her under an overhanging rock and placed her on the sand.

Through many sobs and tears, she told him all that had happened on the canal boat, and that her father had said her mother was dead. And so touched was Phillip MacCauley, he felt the tears rim his own lashes. For a long time, in fact until the rain ceased to beat upon the rocks and shore, they stayed under cover. Most of the time they were silent, most of the time Phillip held the curly head against his breast. When the dawn began to break Tonibel roused herself.

"I'm goin' away now," she said. "I've got to go to my friends. And I can't tell you just how much I'm thankin' you."

"But if I let you go," protested Phillip, "I'll never see you again. Oh, don't do that. Tony, I couldn't stand it now!"

"I couldn't, either," she said under her breath. "I'll be comin' back here to this hole some day."

"When?" asked Phillip, eagerly. "To-day?"

Tonibel shook her head.

"Nope," she replied wearily. "I'm dead beat out."

"And I forgot that," cried the boy. "Tony, darling, will you—will you kiss me before you go?"

Two arms shot out and clasped around his neck. Two eager lips met his in such passionate abandon that for a long time after Tony and Gussie had gone away toward the boulevard Phillip MacCauley lay face downward on the shore, the sun peeping at him from the eastern hill.

Paul Pendlehaven lay wide awake in his bed, his sunken eyes filled with darkened sorrow. His brother had stayed with him the most of the night and now sat beside him.

"Will you sleep?" asked Doctor John.

"I'll try," was the response. "I could if I knew where she was."

Doctor John reached over and took his brother's thin hand.

"The morning may bring her back," he said soothingly. "And Paul, old man, if you worry like this, you'll be back where you were four weeks ago."

The invalid sighed heavily.

"I've grown so accustomed to her," he said in excuse, "and somehow since you told me of her people, I fear something may have happened to her."

"We'll hope for the best," said John Pendlehaven, rising. "Now if I run down for a wink or two will you lie quietly while I'm gone?"

"Yes," came in a breath, and true to his word, Paul Pendlehaven scarcely breathed for a long while after his brother went out, although his heavy gray eyes stared at the breaking dawn. If anyone had told him a month ago, he could have longed for any human being as he now longed for Tony Devon, he wouldn't have believed it. He dreaded the day without her dear smile bending over him. Perhaps she would never come back. At that thought he groaned.

If he could only go to sleep. Only close his eyes—

His lids sank slowly down, and he slept fitfully. Mingled in his dream of Tony Devon came a sharp sound. That, like Tony, must be a dream, too, that sound that was out of the ordinary noises of the day, for although the sun had called into life the bees and birds, Ithaca still slumbered.

The noise came again, striking against his nervous brain and waking him. Suddenly, with panting breath and beating pulses, he lifted himself on his elbow. The screen had been pulled from the window and perhaps ten seconds passed as he stared wildly at it. Then like a shot from a gun, Tony Devon sprang through the window into the room. For a moment the sick man gazed at her with mingled emotions. Something dreadful had happened to her. She was so white, so wraithlike and changed, yet blotching the pallor of her face were reddish blue bruises. Then the bare feet on the distance between them in a bound. The dimples at the corners of her lips lived a moment and were gone.

When Paul Pendlehaven dropped back on the pillow, she spoke. "Me and Gussie's back," she said brokenly. "I climbed up the tree and got to the roof, fearin' to wake up the other folks in the house." She sat down beside the bed. "Somehow I knew you'd be lookin' for me, sir."

It was because she had passed through such a dreadful night and was so terribly tired that she cried a little as a child cries after it has been cruelly punished.

Paul Pendlehaven let his thin hand drop on the frowsty head. Tears stung his own lids like nettles.

"Dear child," he breathed, "dear pretty child, I've waited all night for you. My God, what's happened to you?"

Tony covered her face with her hands.

"Somebody beat me up," she moaned. "I can't tell anything now. And I lost my pretty clothes."

Sudden strength came to Paul Pendlehaven. He sat up straight and forcibly lifted the pitiful face so he could look at it.

"Tony," he began gravely, "I command you to tell me what happened to you. Tell me instantly. If I knew, I could take steps to punish the ruffian who dared to do this thing."

That was just what Tony didn't want. Hadn't she sworn to Edith in the presence of the infinite Christ, that good Shepherd who had given up His life for His sheep, that no matter what Uriah did she wouldn't peach on him?

The tears were still rolling down her cheeks from under lowered lids.

"You have go, helped me, Tony," continued Pendlehaven, "and yet you refuse to let me do what I can."

She tried to think of something to comfort him.

"But sometimes daddies and husbands beat their women folks," she explained.

"Then your father whipped you?" quizzed the doctor.

"That I can't tell," said the girl. "Don't make me. . . . Oh, Lordy, I'm all tuckered out."

It was of no use to put questions any more, thought Pendlehaven. He was persuaded that her father had done this dreadful thing.

At eight o'clock, when Dr. John Pendlehaven softly entered the sick-room he found his brother in sound slumber, and Tony Devon, her face discolored with bruises, fast asleep in the chair by the bedside.

It was a stubborn Tony that faced Doctor John that morning. Adroitly he tried to draw from her the reason for her extreme paleness, for the dark marks stretched across her face, and the meaning of the shudders that suddenly attacked her.

"I can't tell," she reiterated in distress as she had to his brother. "Please don't ask me."

That her mother was dead, she firmly believed. "This she did tell the doctor between many sobs and tears."

"I'll never see her ever any more," she told him tremulously. "And if you'll let me, I'll live here forever and forever and take care of Doctor Paul."

"My brother can't get along without you, dear," he said, deeply touched. "If you had seen how he grieved last night, you wouldn't have made that remark."

"I know he likes me," said the girl, sighing, "and I love him. Why, I love him."

She searched the man's face and caught his smile.

"Better than you do me?" he came in with.

"Yes," said Tonibel, honestly, "but you next—"

Then she thought of Phillip, of the hours he had held her against his breast, of the kiss in the morning's dawn, and she fell into a bashful silence.

When Doctor Pendlehaven told Mrs. Curtis that Tony had returned, her face drew down in a sulky frown.

Ford

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

A Truck That Costs Less to Operate

The Ford worm-driven, One Ton-Truck with demountable rims and pneumatic tires is dependable, as well as serviceable. This, probably more than any other factor, accounts for their popularity. There is no evidence so convincing as that which comes from long practical experience. Like the Ford Car, the Ford One-Ton Truck Ford built throughout—has proven itself. In it are combined, the Ford principles of simplicity, with strength, lowest first cost, lowest operating cost, durability.

In the city on the farm, carrying its load between cities everywhere you will find the One-Ton Truck doing duty. Merchants, manufacturers, farmers, have come to know it as the truck of utmost service.

Standing guard behind the Ford One-Ton Truck is the Ford Service Organization. The Authorized Dealers, and Service Stations, carry complete assortments of genuine Ford parts and employ Ford mechanics to give service to Ford owners.

"Ford—A Business Utility" is a new booklet of solid facts and figures about Ford cars and the Ford One-Ton Truck in business service. Get a copy from the nearest Ford dealer. They are free for the asking.

SENATE DELAYING IMMIGRANT BILL

OPPOSITION TO THE PLAN TO BAR ALIENS FOR A TIME,
SUDDENLY DEVELOPS.

FATE OF MEASURE IN DOUBT

Secretary of Labor Wilson and Senator Dillingham, Both Have Schemes for Restricting the Admission of Foreigners to This Country.

By EDWARD B. CLARK.

Washington.—Prediction was made at the opening of the present congress that in addition to the passage of the imperative appropriation measures, consideration and probably passage would meet the proposal to stem, if not to dam, the present flood of foreign immigration.It took the house of representatives only a short time to put through the immigration bill. It places a one-year embargo on incoming immigrants, thus giving time, if the measure shall pass the senate and receive executive approval, to plan for future legislation which shall keep immigration within bounds.When congress opened, it seemed that the senate was equally keen with the lower house to pass some measure which temporarily, at least, would keep the immigrants out. No sooner, however, had the house passed the Johnson bill, practically placing a ban upon immigration for a period of one year, than opposition to the measure developed in the senate.No legislator in Washington apparently knows just what is going to happen to this bill. Meantime, Ellis Island is overcrowded, and even if every immigrant there is worthy of admission it would take a long time to discover the fact.

Secretary Wilson's Proposal.

In his annual report, Secretary of Labor Wilson advocates the establishment of machinery overseas in cooperation with foreign governments by means of which aliens, before breaking up their homes, may determine whether they will be admitted to the United States. Mr. Wilson advises legislative consideration of this proposal and of some others.Senator Dillingham, former chairman of the committee on immigration, has introduced a bill limiting foreign immigration in any one year to a certain percentage of the aliens of specified nationalities now in the United States. He says that the immigration officials should inform the senate how many nationalities from each foreign country are included in those now seeking admission. Then he says actual determination can be made whether or not the present rate of immigration is a menace to American welfare.There are certain senators who have said they will oppose any embargo, for no matter how short, on immigration.
There are others who are inclined to favor an embargo, but they desire to make adjustments to the proposition which would allow certain classes of persons to come in.The question is an interesting one from many standpoints because of the various elements in American life which either are seeking to make more drastic immigration laws, or are seeking to make them less drastic. It is needless to say that each element of the population is at work on the "sus-ceptibilities of the senate," and it may be that the pressure pro and con which is being brought to bear, is responsible for the sudden condition of uncertainty which has affected the senatorial mind on this question of damping the flood from the other parts of the world.

Naval "Holiday" Plan Revived.

Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, through a joint resolution which he has offered in the senate to bring about a cut of 50 per cent in navy building on the part of the United States, Great Britain and Japan, goes back to an attempt which was made as long ago as 1913 by Great Britain to do something of the same kind through a naval holiday.Of course the resolution may be simply in the nature of a feeler. Some persons have said that it is intended to test the good faith of Japan's desire for a building holiday. Whatever the intention is, the question of diminishing armaments is a vital one in nearly all countries today, and it is a question which is likely to rear its interrogation in the congress of the United States for some time to come.

Back to the Old Question.

In view of what is happening in the world, the present administration believes that the program for ship building which it has recommended should be carried through. Seemingly congress—and perhaps the world—is to get back to the old controversy about the virtues of big armaments. No one in congress believes apparently that the United States can cut its program unless other nations shall follow suit and so it seems likely that this country will continue to build ships so long as other nations, or Great Britain and Japan, at any rate, continue their building activities.Great Britain in 1913, only one year before the great war broke out and brought about a situation which was saved only by the British navy, suggested through Winston Churchill a naval holiday. Representative Hensley of Missouri at that time made the proposal the subject of an approving resolution in the congress of the United States. The resolution, however, was not adopted.There have been some peculiar suggestions advanced as to navy building programs. It has been asked, "Why is it not as well for the nations of the world to be equally weak as equally strong in armament?" Mr. Churchill's plan contemplated simply a "no battleship building" program for all nations for one year. Of course if the suggestion had been adopted the government would have saved some money for the time being, but the question was whether there could be any assurance that these nations would not spend in a second year twice the saving of one year.

Is This a Foolish Suggestion?

So far as the matter of its being just as well for the nations to be equally weak as equally strong is concerned, the only reason for the building of battleships by any one country is that it may keep pace in naval construction with the other powers. No one country wants another country to get ahead of it lest if war should come, annihilation for the weaker sea power should come with it.So it has been suggested, perhaps idly, but nevertheless with enough seriousness to cause some reflection, that all the nations should go back to the wooden ships and smooth-bore guns which cost so little. If no country had anything but ships of oak and cannon of ordinary iron, all fleets, save of course for a preponderance of numbers in some cases, would be equal when meeting broadside to broadside.
It has been asked why equal weakness wouldn't serve the same purpose as equal strength. The battle would go, so the argument runs, as nearly always it must go if luck be eliminated, to the more skillful belligerent.Now all this may seem utterly foolish, and probably it is so, for no nation is likely to go back to the days of the Constitutions, the Temeraires and the Victories, but in a way the proposal points out the position which some-men take on the whole disarmament question.An old-time frigate, like the Constitution, did not cost more than $200,000 or $300,000. A modern battleship costs anywhere from $10,000,000 to $20,000,- 000.

America Should Honor This Hero.

The United States government on occasion has given marks of its official regard to officials of other countries.
It was only the other day that General Neville, the great French soldier, was decorated with the Distinguished Service medal of the United States.
Others have likewise been honored.There are many men in minor places in life who have done heroic deeds which have gone unrecognized. If all the gallant things that were done in the last war were known and properly rewarded, there would not be Distinguished Service medals nor Distinguished Service crosses enough to go around. Captains, lieutenants and privates performed great individual deeds on the battlefields which were unseen. These men had nothing but their own satisfaction of service well done for a reward.The Medal of Honor, which is the highest decoration the United States government gives, can be given only to those who have done something beyond the call of duty and which if they had not done would not submit them to criticism. The Medal of Honor can be given, however, only for an act that has been attested by several witnesses. So it is that men who have done things when witnesses were not present, or when witnesses did not fully realize all that was being done, have deserved the medal but never have received it.

Lieutenant Craven's Gallant Deed.

A newspaper man who is a close friend has told me the story of Lieutenant Craven of the British naval reserve who performed a most glorious deed in the storm-swept waters off Ireland when the destroyer of which he was in command, the Mounsey, was a part of a convoy which had in charge a large number of ships carrying American troops and civilians.My newspaper friend was on one of the vessels. The storm was so terrific that everything loose on all ships had been carried away. Nobody expected to see the land. The vessels were almost helpless in the driving seas. All at once one of the transports, the Otranto, ran on a rock. The waves were beating on her grimly, and it seemed virtually impossible that any help could reach her. Lieutenant Craven, in command of the Mounsey, with the spirit of old "Ulysses" Millerville, made up his mind to do what he could. Four times he brought his destroyer alongside the Otranto, only to have her grind away again. Once more he came alongside. A wave struck the Otranto and she fouled with the Mounsey, tearing a great hole in the stern of the destroyer. The sailors instantly went over the side with canvas to stop the inrush of the waters.Lieutenant Craven in that awful secondly managed to hold his destroyer alongside the transport and rescued 30 American soldiers who jumped to the Mounsey's deck. It was one of the most heroic deeds known to sea warfare. Five hundred Americans lost their lives, but if it had not been for the high courage of this lieutenant of the British navy the number would have been 1,200. Craven's deed should be remembered, and seemingly the United States should do the remembering.

Old Habits.

"Sir, when you eat here you needn't dust off the plate." "Bug pardon.
Force of habit merely. I'm an old sailor."

"Just a few minutes now, Peggy dear, and Daddy will be back home with a nice bottle of

KEMP'S BALSAM

for you. Then you can go to sleep and forget that horrid old cough."

And as usual Mother is right, but why not save poor old Dad the night trip to the drug store next time by having an extra bottle of Kemp's Balsam in the house all ready for big and little coughs alike?

Additions to the weight.

In the early days of the history the earth grew rapidly by the addition of meteoric matter. It is still growing in the same manner, though scarcely to an appreciable extent for the mass of meteoric matter that yearly is reckoned to fall upon the earth. In the course of ages the great planets have swept up much of the fragments of the original distribution, and the only available supply of meteoric matter is to be that brought by comets.

No Reciprocity.

After the guests at their party had gone, Mrs. Mimby said to her husband: "What on earth did you mean, John, by telling the Smiths that my humor was positive, but not negative?" "I meant," said Mr. Mimby, "that you could make a joke, but couldn't take one!"

Fear Not to Reform.

MILLER—CONLON
On Saturday afternoon, January first, Rev. J. Albert Eyer, using the ring ceremony of the Reformed church, united in marriage, at the Reformed parsonage, Bedford, Pa., Mr. Cecil V. Miller of Clearville, Pa. and Miss Janet A. Conlon of near Clearville. Mr. Miller is a rural mail carrier, his route starting from Clearville. Miss Conlon was a daughter of the late James Conlon. Both young people have many friends who wish them all that is good in the new life upon which they have entered. Immediately after the ceremony, accompanied by a sister of the groom they left upon an extended wedding trip to the State of Iowa. Upon their return they will reside in Clearville.
